NEW BLOG POST: Fashion and Luxury Brands Embrace Partnerships with Everyday Items and Streetwear

Papier x The Met

Papier collaboration with the Met is inspired by Art Nouveau and Margaret Neilson Armstrong's book covers. The collection showcases handcrafted stationery with abstract shapes and gouache prints. Chief Product Officer, Molly Park, mentions the natural motifs like plants and florals, reflect Art Nouveau's freedom of expression. The collab truly brings us back to the Belle Èpoque.

H&M x Mugler

H&M launches its highly anticipated collaboration with French fashion brand Mugler. The collection perfectly embodies Mugler's distinct and energetic style, highlighting strong and confident silhouettes. The collaboration honors Mugler's iconic legacy by featuring a blend of limited-edition archival pieces and contemporary designs while making it affordable for all fashion lovers.

Dua Lipa x Donatella Versace

Dua Lipa and Donatella Versace's "La Vacanza" collection debuted at Cannes, inspired by Versace's '90s collections. The summery color palette and signature butterfly motif reflect Lipa's style. The co-designed collection celebrates confidence, strength, and freedom!
